The negro is about five feet ten inches high; copper color; no beard; weighs 150 or 160 lbs. He is dressed in a brown blanket coat, wool hat, coarse shoes, and striped around the leg; plays pretty well on the fiddle.

THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1859.

The Louisville Journal and Frankfort Yeoman are engaged in a discussion as to the soundness of the latter on the slavery question. We never have doubted, and do not now doubt, the devotion of the editor of the Yeoman to the South and Southern interests, but his present position is wrong, and in taking it he separates himself from the whole South and nearly every Democratic as well as in the Union. The Democratic party, and all true Democratic statesmen, have ever held that it is the duty of Congress, either through the agency of the Federal Executive, or the Judiciary, or by direct legislation upon the Territories, to protect the property of all persons living in the Territories; to protect alike a man's slave as well as his horse. And this is the doctrine of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Dred Scott case; and therefore the Yeoman does not adhere to the Dred Scott decision, but broadly decries from it, as Judge Douglas has done.

We hope that the editor of the Yeoman has been misunderstood in defining his position, and that a further review of this question will place him right.—Paducah Herald
We doubt very much whether the editor of the Herald, when he penned the above paragraphs, understood exactly what he had said or what he wanted to say. We are, however, grossly misunderstood and misrepresented by his remarks. It is not true that we differ from the Democratic party of the South on this question, or that we have departed from the Dred Scott decision as Judge Douglas has done, or that we have adopted Douglas' peculiar views of the powers of a territorial legislature. It is true, however, that we are much opposed to the further agitation of the slavery question on the proposition of Congressional interference; and if the editor understood his party platform, he too would oppose it. We do not ask for Congressional interference in favor of the slaveholder, because we deem it unnecessary and impracticable—and it would be asking what every one knows we would never get.

The editor talks at random when he intimates that nearly every Democratic statesman in the Union favors this absurd idea of Congressional protection or intervention. He cannot point to a live politician or to a press in the North that does not to one in the South, excluding the few in this section who entertain extreme views. The national Democracy in 1856, and the Kentucky Democracy on the 8th of January last, adopted the principle of non-interference by Congress in State or Territory as one of the prime articles of party faith; and notwithstanding the fact that the Paducah Herald condemns us, we must continue to stand by the national platform. We call his attention to this portion of the Cincinnati platform, as it has evidently escaped his memory:

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:
1. Resolved, That of all things which regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories and whose avowed policy is, if unsuccessful, most end in civil war and dissolution—the American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great nationalities of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—non-interference by Congress with Slavery in State and Territory, or in the District of Columbia.

We have always maintained, and the Herald could not have understood so otherwise, that slavery is established by the Federal Constitution in every Territory of the United States, and that it is the duty of the Federal Government to afford it equal protection with other species of private property. We say it is the duty of the Government to do this, meaning thereby that it is the duty of the three separate branches, Legislative, Executive, and Judicial, in their respective spheres, and not, as the Herald contends, the duty of Congress exclusively. We look chiefly to the Judiciary and the Executive for protection in all kinds of property, and these should afford ample protection for slave property in the Territories. In this view of the case it will be seen we are not inconsistent with the Dred Scott decision, from which we quote the following:

Now, as we have already said in an earlier part of this opinion, upon the different point, the right of property in a slave is distinctly and expressly affirmed in the Constitution.
And if the Constitution recognizes the right of property of the master in a slave, and makes no distinction between that description of property and other property owned by a citizen, no tribunal, acting under the authority of the United States, whether it be legislative, executive, or judicial, has a right to draw such a distinction, or deny to it the benefit of the provisions and guarantees which have been provided for the protection of private property against the encroachments of the Government.
Under this decision it will be seen that it is not within the power of a Territorial Legislature to pass any laws unfriendly to slavery or the rights of slaveholders, and that protection to slave property is afforded without the special intervention of Congress: that is to say, if protection is afforded to any species of private property, for no distinction can be drawn by any legislative, executive, or judicial tribunal, acting under the authority of the United States. So says the Supreme Court.

The Board of Directors of the State Agricultural Society met in this place on yesterday. Four propositions were before them in regard to the point at which the next annual fair should be held, viz: one from the Mason, Fleming, and Lewis Society; one from the Mason and Bracken Association; one from the Bourbon, and the last from the Fayette Agricultural Society. Lexington was selected as the place, and the second Tuesday in September as the time, of commencing the next State Fair. The Board had not completed their premium list on yesterday.

LEXINGTON.—It will be seen by a notice in another column that Mr. C. E. Mooney, the "Corporal," has taken a partner, and opened a wholesale and retail commission house in Lexington, where they propose to keep on hand a full supply of choice groceries, fine wines and brandies, confectioneries, tea, coffee, cigars, tobacco, &c., of the best brands. It is hardly necessary for us to say anything about the Corporal, as he is known in all this section of the country as an active, industrious, and accommodating business man. His partner, Mr. Wright, is an agreeable, clever gentleman, and we feel warranted in recommending him and the firm to the patronage of the public.

NEW MUSIC.—We are indebted to the composer, F. W. Rauch, No. 82 Fourth street, Cincinnati, for two new pieces of music—the "Canary Bird Schottische" and the "Colson Schottische," the former of which we have heard, and think exquisitely beautiful. Mr. R. composes some most excellent pieces which he publishes himself; and, besides, keeps on hand a large supply of all the latest and most fashionable music published. Our musical friends can get a full supply of music and musical merchandise of the best kind by giving him a call. See card in another column.

MERCHANT TAILOR.—We call the attention of persons visiting Louisville to M. B. Swain's large stock of every description and style of spring and summer goods, consisting of beautiful cloths, cassimeres, vestings, and all kinds of gent's furnishing goods, collars, shirts, cravats, neckties, suspenders, half hose, gloves, &c., which are fresh and fashionable. His aim is to make clothing to fit neat and tasty, and in the most fashionable style of the art. Store, Fourth street, No. 4, under Masonic hall.

ASCENSION CHURCH.—The Bishop of the Diocese will visit this parish on next Sunday, April 10. Divine service and sermon at 11 o'clock, A. M., and Confirmation at 7½ P. M.

District Convention.
The undersigned, constituting a Central Committee, appointed by the late Democratic State Convention, to further the more perfect organization of the party in the Eighth Congressional district, with an earnest desire to that end, now recommend the holding of a DISTRICT CONVENTION on the 3d day of May, at Nicholasville, Jessamine county, for the purpose of selecting a candidate to represent this district in the next Congress of the United States. It is earnestly hoped that primary meetings for the appointment of delegates to this Convention, will be promptly held in the several counties, so that every locality may be fully represented.

A. J. James—His Appointments.
We publish elsewhere the list of appointments recently made by A. J. James, the Democratic candidate for Attorney General, to address the people, extending from the 13th inst. to the 14th of May. We are pleased to see this manifestation of a purpose on the part of one of our ablest champions, to enter promptly and earnestly upon the work before him, and trust soon to be able to make a similar announcement for those associated with him on the State ticket. Mr. James is fully competent to the duty devolved upon him by his party. He is no novice in the work, nor are the Opposition acquainted with his power on the stump. Though he has been eminently successful at the bar, having devoted his life to the practice of law, he has held a prominent position in the political arena, and has far surpassed in debate, and efficient canvasser, he will be found a troublesome opponent to any one who may be rash enough to encounter him at any of his appointments. We anticipate signal advantage to the cause from his advocacy.

Misrepresentation is evidently to be the strong card of the Opposition in the pending canvass. Reckless attacks on the Administration, groundless charges against its financial policy, false tales of expenditures and indefinite allegations of corruption will become the staple of newspaper articles and cross-road speeches. It is highly important that these arguments should be met and refuted. The falsity of their charges should be exposed, and their own infidelity to the people, whose confidence they seek, held up to the just indignation of the masses. No more effective means to this work can be adopted than the activity of our speakers, and the convocation of large bodies of the people at their appointments. It is highly important that every possible publicity be given to these announcements, and that our friends in the various localities take steps to secure the attendance of all who can be induced to be present. Democratic principles have ever prospered by full, free, and frank discussion. Based upon the immutable truths of free government, and sustained by past experience, they will ever find their surest vindication in the intelligence and sober reflection of the masses. Let the people understand thoroughly the true issues of the canvass, clearly comprehend the ultimate purposes and the present relations of the parties in contest, and such a verdict will be rendered in August as will forever seal the doom of all opposition in Kentucky as at present organized.

The Clayton and Bulwer Treaty.

An attack on the President has appeared in an evening contemporary which demands a passing notice. It is full of misrepresentations. We shall not quote its insulting and offensive language, but shall relate it by the change of a few plain and indisputable facts.

1st. The President has never changed his policy in regard to the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. From the time he went to England as Minister of the United States until the present moment it has been always the same. He went to England for the purpose of convincing the British government that their construction of this treaty was unfounded. They were in possession of the whole coast of Central America, with the exception of a small portion, and they contented that the treaty authorized them to continue in possession. It was contended by the United States that this treaty obliged them to abandon all their possessions in Central America, including the Mosquito-protectorate and the Bay Islands. The issue was thus fairly joined. In the President's first annual message, in December, 1857, in what then appeared to be the irreconcilable difference of opinion between the two governments, he only said the following language: "The fact is, that when two nations like Great Britain and the United States, mutually desirous, as they are, and I trust ever may be, of maintaining the most friendly relations with each other, have unfortunately concluded a treaty which they understand in senses directly opposite, the wisest course is to abrogate such a treaty by mutual consent, and to commence anew." At this very time, however, he added this "whilst entertaining these sentiments, I shall nevertheless not refuse to contribute to any reasonable adjustment of the Central American questions which is not practically inconsistent with the American interpretation of the treaty. Overtures for this purpose have been recently made by the British government, in a friendly spirit, which I cordially recognize; but whether this renewed effort will result in success, I am not yet prepared to express an opinion. A brief report will determine." After much negotiation, these "overtures" have led to a satisfactory result. The American construction of the treaty will be substantially carried into effect. The Mosquito protectorate and the Bay Islands will no doubt be surrendered to Nicaragua and Honduras, and Sir Wm. G. Ouseley has gone to Central America with instructions to conclude treaties to carry this policy into effect.

The substance of his instructions has been communicated to this government, and we have full faith in the loyalty of the British government. If he has exceeded them in any particular, we have no doubt he will be called to a rigid account. He cannot hold any longer the office of the next Congress, this arrangement will be carried into effect.
2d. As to Sir William Gore Ouseley, all that has ever been said as to his interference with this question is wholly unfounded, and is the offspring of morbid suspicion. During his residence in Washington, he always said, and we believe truly, that he was awaiting definite instructions upon the subject. He never held any conference of any kind respecting it either with the President or the Secretary of State. All that ever transpired in relation to it was between Lord Napier, the acknowledged Minister of Great Britain, and the government of the United States. After Sir William's departure the substance of these instructions was communicated to the Secretary of State through Lord Napier; in fact, the government have never held any conference of any kind respecting it either with the President or the Secretary of State. All that ever transpired in relation to it was between Lord Napier, the acknowledged Minister of Great Britain, and the government of the United States. After Sir William's departure the substance of these instructions was communicated to the Secretary of State through Lord Napier; in fact, the government have never held any conference of any kind respecting it either with the President or the Secretary of State.

3d. In the course of the negotiation, Lord Napier did at one time suggest that he thought the British government might favorably receive a proposition to abrogate the Clayton and Bulwer treaty; but he gave notice that, if this were done, the British government would insist upon retaining the Bay Islands, the most important part of their possessions in that region. This proposition was, of course, rejected. Our policy, from the beginning, was to exclude Great Britain from the Mosquito protectorate and the Bay Islands, and if we had acceded to this suggestion, Great Britain would have retained possession of by far the most commanding position on the coast of Central America. We should then have had no other alternative but to attempt to drive her out by force of arms, or to attempt to drive her out by force of arms. Surely no American statesman could ever have acceded to such a proposition.
The truth is, that when the time shall arrive for communicating to the public the correspondence in relation to the Clayton and Bulwer treaty, they will be astonished, even in this age of misrepresentation, at the falsehoods which have been circulated in regard to this whole subject.

Rheumatism Cured.

To the readers of the Yeoman: Preserve this notice. If not afflicted yourself, you may serve suffering humanity by sending it to some one who is.

Dr. Mortimore, by personal treatment, and the use of his remedy, by Physicians and Druggists, has cured probably twenty thousand cases of this painful and paralyzing disease—comprising cases of every seeming form, from those of a recent inflammatory (acute) character, to old chronic cases of ten, twenty, and even thirty years' standing.

This disease is becoming more prevalent every year, and is seldom cured, or even alleviated, by the usual course of treatment. In its active form it often proves fatal, or if not soon arrested, becomes chronic—stiffens the joints, contracts the ligaments, muscles, and tendons, and thus renders the sufferer a cripple for life, or, if ever at towards cure, even by the use of this remedy, requires longer treatment and greater expense.

This is a vegetable internal remedy which cured the proprietor of it after long suffering, and all the usual remedies known had failed, and is safe to be used in any state of health—even by the most delicate female or child, and its success, in curing rheumatism, is attested by thousands, among whom are eminent physicians, ministers of various denominations, prominent journalists, and individuals of high standing throughout our country, such as should inspire confidence in every rational mind.

This evidence can be had on call at the office; or those at a distance, by addressing the proprietor, will receive, by mail, a circular of evidence. The remedy can be had at $5 p. bottle, or five bottles for $20. Persons ordering at a distance can remit at the proprietor's risk by registering letter, and the medicine will be forwarded by express, or as directed, to
